First Summer Work Program on Crocker Conservation Area a Success

This summer has been a productive one on the Crocker Conservation Area in Fitchburg. NCLT sponsored the work of five local teens, to maintain and construct trails on its 150-acre conservation property near Overlook Reservoir. Lead by Stewardship Coordinator, Christopher Reed, the crew has constructed over 1.3 miles of new trails and posted more than 350 trail markers on the CCA, since it began work on July 1st.

Three of the workers are participants in Montachusett Opportunity Council's Youth Works Program, which provides part-time job placements for eligible teens.

In addition to their work on the Crocker Conservation Area, the crew has done clean up and trail work at Overlook and Marshall Reservoirs, where the land trust holds a conservation restriction.

Principal funding for the Summer Work Program was provided by Red Line Wall Systems, Inc., a construction company based in Leominster.

Our Conservation Areas

Crocker Conservation Area, Fitchburg

In May, students from Francis Parker Charter Essential School spent a day on the CCA, doing environmental field work. Teacher and NCLT director, Clayton Hobart lead a "birding" group, while another group worked with a GPS unit and compass to locate property boundaries. After an outdoor lunch at Overlook Reservoir, the groups exchanged leaders. Everyone learned something, while enjoying the conservation land on a beautiful day.

Rome Conservation Area, Gardner

May 20th was the Public Opening of this 175 acre conservation area. It was an occasion to honor the Rome Family, donors of the conservation land and to thank city officials and citizens whose support made the opening possible. NCLT president, Alan Rousseau announced the creation of the Rome Conservation Area Stewardship Fund. After the ceremony, participants had the opportunity to hike on 1.5 miles of new trails constructed by Boy Scouts of Troop 4 in Gardner.
